The World Architecture Day : Celebrating the architect's commitment to our societies, our ecosystems and our cities

Posted On October 4, 2021 in Architecture

Architecture in the larger sense represents the evolution of human civilization itself. From mud huts to royal palaces, from mass consumption properties to luxury homes the syntax of architecture and design has given the human race a class and an identity. In maintaining this identity and defining it from time to time the role of architects has been very prominent. Today on the first Monday of October as we celebrate yet another instance of the World Architecture Day, let's take a look at the industry reactions.
